

[Raul]

What areas do you find most challenging when it comes to avoiding food waste? Like, I give you examples like over purchasing, leftovers, food going bad.

[Lina]

Well, the most challenging to avoid food waste, maybe is the food going bad. Because it depends of the preparation of the food. Maybe seafood or something like that is probably going bad really fast.

Maybe the leftovers. This could be really challenging because there is not a lot of people that want this kind of food. But it could help people that don't have the resources to pay to have food in a restaurant or something like that.

[Abel]

What challenges, if there are any, do you face when you find a different place, like when you want to eat something else around the university?

[Juan José]

I feel that the first thing I see is the price. I feel like that is a limitation for me because I don't have as much economic resources to be able to have the pleasure of having lunch every day at $25,000. So, initially, whenever I look for a new place, it's like looking for the menu clearly and making it easy for it not to be so expensive.

[Abel]

Ok, and let's say if there was an application, a website that lists all the food options around the university, what characteristics do you think would be most useful?

[Juan José]

I feel that the most useful thing would be to be able to see the menus of the restaurant and also see the prices in detail. And I don't know how close it is to the university or where it is.

[Luimarco]

Do you think that the food here at the university is bad? Is it unhealthy?

[Doris]

No, I don't think so. I don't know, well, I think it depends more on how one moves within the university because there are many food points. And it is more the limitation of oneself and the menu that one chooses, but I feel that there is variety in the menus depending on the tastes of the people.

[Luimarco]

Would you like to be able to find another type of food at the university?

[Doris]

No, I don't feel that it is very complete. You can find from a shake to junk food and it's fine. So no, I feel that it is already very complete.

[Mario]

If there was an application like the one I am telling you, how much would you be willing to pay for the food, let's say, of a bakery? Half the price or a third of the price if it is the food that has not been sold at the end of the day? Imagine a bread that was made at 5 in the morning and was not sold at 6 in the afternoon.

[Luis Marina]

Well, it would be good to buy it a little cheaper to make it even if it is a cake.

[Mario]

A little cheaper, what do you think? And how much is the bread sold? Around 400?

[Luis Marina]

500.

[Mario]

And at the end of the day, you see in the application that the bread is at 300, would you buy it?

[Luis Marina]

Yes.

[Mario]

Or would it seem to you that it is very expensive, like 300 pesos?

[Lina Marina]

Well, they should leave it around 200.

[Mario]

Around 200, that's a good answer.

[Luimarco]

How is your routine to go to lunch or eat something at the university?

[Lorena]

In general, I always bring lunch, since the budget does not reach, I think the value of lunch, which is a little expensive. So most of the time we bring it. When you can, yes, lunch.

In this case in Villa Paulina, which was when there was a cafeteria. And lunch is delicious.
